TENER ELECTED
By 40,000 Plurality

The entire Republican State ticket is elected by a plurality estimated at 40,000. The Legislature and State Senate is overwhelming Republican. The Congressional delegation stands 25 Republicans and seven Democrats. This three-cornered battle, slander, villification and unrest in certain quarters of the State made the battle very uncertain for a few hours after the polls closed, yet we never for one moment believed that Congressman Tener and his associates on the Republican ticket would fail to receive a majority of the ballots. The Democratic State ticket was lost sight of. Berry, who has been a follower of every party and ism in his effort to feed from the public crib has disappeared never to be heard of again.

The election of the Republican State candidates, all gentlemen of ability, will be an honor to Pennsylvania and assures a continuance of the wise policy pursued by Governor Stuart.

In Cameron county the campaign has been very decent—free from campaign personalities, boodle and liquor. With the very light vote cast (less than 1,300) is regretted by all, yet it answered every purpose. Had the entire vote been cast no doubt both the Republican State and county ticket would have been increased two hundred. However, the handsome majority given Hon. Josiah Howard (253) was sufficient for all purposes.

The battle has closed and now all can turn their attention to matters of greater importance to Cameron county—Greater Cameron.

The elections in many States are not what they should be. New York, Ohio, New Jersey, and Mass, have elected the Democratic Governors. Lower House of Congress will likely be Democratic. The Legislatures in most of the States going Democratic remain Republican, insuring the election of Republican United States Senators.

Emporium Social Club.

The opening dance of the Emporium Social Club was given at the opera house on Wednesday evening and was largely attended and heartily enjoyed. The membership of the club numbers 53 and 44 of this number were present. For once, in the history of Emporium, the young men out-numbered the young ladies, there being about thirty-eight ladies present. These dances will be given every two weeks by the club. With Mr. B. G. Erskine as president and Mr. C. Harold Seger as secretary the club is sure to prosper.

Very Enjoyable Hallowe'en Party.

At the summons of the "Gray Witch" and "Black Wizard Orders of Necromancers," a party of about twenty young people assembled themselves at the home of Miss Rotha Kreider, at Driftwood, Pa., on Hallowe'en.

Each gentleman who accepted the invitatin was given, on his arrival, a padlock fashioned from card board, on which was sketched a lock, and beneath the lock these lines were written:

"Here's the padlock, find the key
And learn what fate's prepared for thee.'

According to these instructions each owner found the girl whose cardboard key fitted his lock. Beneath the card board covers of the padlock were sheets ofpaper containing instructions for the evening, and on each page each gentleman found a girl's name, with whom, in turn, he carried out the instructions.

After the "Gray Witch" and "Black Wizard" had ushered in the guests and presented them with keys and padlocks they leftthem in the care of two ghosts who acted as guides during the evening.

The first number on the program was a wedding ring contest, in which a wedding ring was fastened to the chandeliers by means of a piece of rubber, which was kept in motion. Each guest in turn, tried to learn his fate by trying to catch the ring by means of a forked stick. If he succeeded in getting the forked stick through the ring, fate decreed that he or she should be successful in love and wedlock. Miss Edna Mitchell and Mr. Thaddeus Brooks were the only successful ones.

The next number was a pumpkin seed contest. Each guest was furnished with a needle and thread. Then a large pumpkin, decorated in black, shaped like a huge bowl, and containing dried pumpkin seeds, was placed in the centre of the room, and each guest tried to see who could string the largest number of pumpkin seeds in the next fifteen minutes. Miss Carrie Corbett was the winner and received a handsome "fried-cake man," as a prize.

The guides then directed the guests to "The Spring of Perpetual Youth," which was found in a room in a remote part of the house The way was dimly lighted and all along the way were ghostly looking figures. The room was beautifully decorated in green and white.

The spring was a large bucket surrounded with green, representing a moss covered well-sweep. From this spring, two little girls, Georgie Kreider and Francelia Osburn, dressed as fairies, served fruit punch.

All again were led back to the drawing room, where a large black witch holding a broomstich had been pinned on a sheet. On this sheet were pinned small envelopes containing slips of paper with fortunes written on each.

Eachguest was blindfolded and turned about several times and was then allowed to seek her fortune by touching the sheet with the end of a small broomstick. The fortune promising the brightest future was placed nearest the witche's outstretched hand.

After all had read their fortunes, they were again directed to a room in a remote part of the house. This room was decorated in Japanese style, where dwelt the "Sibyl of Terefia," who told fortunes with teagrounds. Miss Gertrude Hill, with great tact, unfolded the future to all the guests with her magic cup of tea.

The ghosts again met the guests at the parlor door and guided them by a mysterious path, around the house to a cave, where dwelt the wizard wise and grave. Mr. Winslow, who has become a famous Astrologer, was dressed in a flawing robe and wore a false face, representing a hermit in his den. The guests were greatly amused at his appearance and skill in fortune telling.

After finding their way back to the parlor they were directed to a room beautifully decorated in flowers and evergreen, where Ophelia from her bower presented a flower frome her basket to each of her guests and told its significance.

The ghosts now pointed to the gapsy's home, a tent with leaves and branches representing the woods. Chestnuts were strewn among the leaves. A five-minute chestnut hunt was now announced. Mr. Arnold received the prize for finding the greatest number of chestnuts.

Awful, last and best of all
Each guest went to the ball;
"Mystic chamber" named,
Twenty or more entered at the door
Clapped their hands three times or more
Awaited the answer strange.

The "Mystic Chamber" was the dining room. The guests clapped their hands three times and two boys appeared dressed as Oriental slaves, in black bloomers with yellow turbans and sashes. They served refreshments which consisted of chicken salad, potato chips, nut salad, sandwiches, olives, coffee, ice cream and cake, in which the color scheme of yellow and black were carried out.

A luck cake was then passed which contained a ring which signified marriage within a year, a dime, which signified wealth, and a thimble which signified a life of loneliness.

At this feast everyone sat Oriental fashion on cushions on the floor, which was covered with a rug. The room was decorated in green and white and in the centre was an artificial fountain surrounded with plants and moss-colored paper.

After all had enjoyed the feast the "Black Wizard" again appeared and directed the gentlemen to a mysterious chamber where they were transformed into Indians, Jews, Wizards, Dutchmen, clowns, etc., while the "Gray Witch," with her magic wand, transformed the ladies into beautiful fairies with smiling countenances.

After keeping step to the lively music for a short time a committee guessed the masked parties. The one remaining unguessed the longest received the prize.

The guests now were ready to depart to their homes. All reported a good time.

DEATH'S DOINGS.

DODSON.

ROBERT C. DODSON, aged 50 years, died at the family home on Fourth Street, at one o'clock Wednesday afternoon, after a lingering illness of several months. Mr. Dodson has been a resident of Emporium for 39 years coming here in 1871 from Williamsport. He entered the employ of the late Hon. Leonard Taggart, as drug clerk, and a few years later started in business for himself, which he successfully conducted for several years. On October 1st of this year, (39th anniversary of his advent in Emporium), he went to Williamsport and entered the hospital in hopes that he would be benefitted, but receiving no encouragement he returned home. Deceased is survived by his wife and six children, Frank, Margaret, Ophelia, Mary, Avice and John, all at home. He is also survived by an aged mother, who resides in Florida, in feeble health, and the following brothers and sisters, Jessee, Ida, Stella, Will, Frank and Charles, all residing in the far west.

The death of Mr. Dodson, while not unexpected, is very generally deplored by our citizens. Mr. Dodson, whom we always greatly respected, was an honor to his family and this community. During his long illness every effort was made to ascertain the cause of his illness yet it seemed to be a mystery. After death an autopsy was performed by Drs. Smith and Bush, yesterday afternoon, and it was found that his malady was enemia, of an incurable nature.

The funeral takes place at the family residence on Saturday at 2 p m., Rev. R. H. Bent, pastor of Presbyterian church to officiate.

FOX.

In loving remembrance of the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. William Fox, who died November 5th, 1910, at the family home at Cameron, aged three months and 16 days.

'We had a little treasure once, he was our joy and pride,
We loved him, ah! perhaps too well for soon he slept and died;
All is dark within our dwelling, lonely are our hearts to-day,
For the one we loved so dearly, has forever passed away.
This lovely bud, so young and fair, called hence by early doom,
Called to show how sweet a flower in Paradise would bloom;
E'er sin could harm or sorrow fade, death came with friendly care,
The opening bud to heaven conveyed and bade it blossom there.
Another little lamb has gone to dwell with him who gave;
Another little darling babe, lies sheltered in the grave;
God needed one more angel child amidst his shining band,
And so he bent with loving smile and clasped our darling's hand.
Call not back the dear departed, anchored safe where storms are o'er,
On the border land we left him, soon to meet and part no more;
Far beyond this world of changes, far beyond this world of care,
We shall find our missing loved one, in our Father's mansion fair."

BUBUR.

MRS. JOSEPHINE BUBUR, wife of our former townsman, Mr. Edward Bubur, died at Buffalo, where the family have resided for several years, at the General Hospital last Thursday, following an operation. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon and interment was made at Buffalo. Mesdames B. L. Spence and Jason Loucks, cousins of Mr. Bubur, attended the funeral, returning to Emporium on Tuesday.

Individuality and Feeding in Milk Production.

By individuality is meant all those inherited or inborn peculiarities which distinguish the cow as a milk producer from other cows including both breed and individual differences. These qualities fix the capacity of the animal regarded as a milk producing machine. They set the limit to the amount of milk she can be made to produce, and practically determine its quality also.

It is quite commonly believed that the composition of milk, more particularly the percentage of fat, may be materially altered by feeding. A large number of careful experiments, however, have failed to show any particularly important effect of food on the composition of milk. Heavy feeding, especially with feeds rich in protein, tends to make the milk a little less watery, and thus to increase slightly the percentage of fat, and of the other ingredients as well. In a few cases, too, a special but rather slight effect on the fat contents of the milk has been observed. Practically, however, the differences which can be produced in the composition of milk by changes in the feed are too small to be of any economic significance. The amount of milk produced by a herd can be affected within wide limits by the feeding, but a permanent change in its composition can only be brought about by a change in the make up of the herd, either by purchase or by breeding and selection.

Be the cow ever so good, she cannot produce milk unless supplied with sufficient and suitable food and given proper care. On scant feed and with bad handling, she will give little milk whatever the amount which she might produce. In other words, while individuality fixes the capacity of the cow, the amount of milk which she actually does give depends, within this limit, on her feeding and care.—From the Correspondnce Courses of the Pennsylvania State College.

The Athletic Association of Emporium High School will open the season of basket ball at this place next Wednesday evening, at the opera house at eight o'clock. The toss-up will be with the strong team from Renovo. The home team has been in practise for several weeks and a good game can be expected. Admission will be 15 and 25 cents. Real Estate Transfer.

According to the St. Marys Gazette, there has been placed on record in the Recorder's office at Ridgway a deed transfering a tract of timber land of about 4000 acres from the Goodyear Lumber Company to the Kaul and Hall Lumber Company. The new tract is situated near their present operations at Trout Run. The Company will extend their railroad into the new property and all the timber, which consists of both hard and soft wood will be cut and brought to St. Marys for manufacturing purposes. This means much for our neighboring city and it will extend the lumber operations for this Company for at least ten years.

"The Wash Girl" is the title of a new play that is being brought out in New York. If it succeeds we may expect somebody to follow immediately with a play written around "The Scrub Lady."

That man champion dishwasher ought to feel pretty cheap when he finds that the head of the domestic science movement says the men can take over all the dishwashing for all she cares.

The deaths from cholera in Russia this season according to official reports have now reached the alarming total of 83,613. No wonder, under the circumstances, that western Europe feels concern.

On the whole, American cities have been growing faster than was supposed. Now for the census of farming counties, to see how many of the million immigrants a year have been going there.

The department of agriculture does not think much of the back to the farm idea unless the city man acquires some practical knowledge of farming; a point the city man with farm yearning is apt to overlook.

"One of the most unique." Stupid characterization, isn't it? Yet one sees it almost every day in carelessly written newspapers. If the reporters would pause to think of what unique means they would not employ a construction implying that any unique thing can be more so that another.

A Japanese paper predicts that the United States will have a great future influence in China. Uncle Sam has not plotted for such a position but has simply treated the old empire with sincere friendly consideration.

We should be greatly relieved to know whether the American woman is or is not beautiful. Here comes a Russian countess who says she is not. And the last foreigner, who we believe was French, insisted that she is. Take your choice.

DEMOCRACY OPTIMISTIC.

Uncle Sam—H'm, I wouldn't coun t your chickens before they're hatched.

THE REAL QUESTION

OVERSHADOWING ISSUE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Effect of Democratic Victory at the Polls Is Here Made Plain—Something for Republican Voters to Ponder Over.

The arrogance of Democratic leaders in not only assuming that they will control the next house of representatives, but in declaring that they will pass a tariff-for-revenue-only bill makes this an issue that overshadows every other question of the campaign. Whatever difference of opinion there may be concerning the present tariff there can be none from a Republican standpoint—a united Republican standpoint—regarding a tariff-for-revenue-only—which means free trade, or worse than free trade.

We must have government revenues annually amounting to over $700,000,000, half of which must come from customs duties—in other words we must so adjust our tariff as to bring us $35,000,000 from duties on imports. We can do as Great Britain does, tax tea and coffee and other necessaries which we do not produce, or we can lower the duties on competing products so low that immense importations will be necessary to produce the desired revenue.

Suppose the average duty were put at 10 per cent. That means, to raise the necessary $350,000,000 revenue, importations amounting in value to $3,500,000,000 and that does not include imports free of duty and with a largely increased free list such as is promised or threatened by Champ Clark & Co., we may well put the estimate of imports at $5,000,000,000, a large portion of which will replace or drive out American production. And further bear in mind that 90 per cent. of this represents labor.

One-third to one-half or our working men are thrown entirely out of work at once, and the wages of those remaining at work must be most substantially reduced. That loss of purchasing power hits the farmer who realizes no profits on his year's work, and he stops buying all luxuries and many necessaries. Then the railroads are affected, and men must be laid off and wages reduced. Then follows the closing of jobbing houses, the failure of merchants and ruin and want in many homes. We thus pay the price—an awful price—for an experience that might have been avoided.

But the closing of factories and the reduction of wages is not all that follows buying abroad what we can make at home. These goods must be paid for, and in gold. Before we buy a dollar's worth we owe $300,000,000 or $400,000,000 abroad for our freight bills, interest and dividends on foreign investments and tourists' exchange. An adverse balance of trade then means a drainage of gold, means a scarcity of money, means the closing of banks and the bankruptcy of corporations, firms and individuals. It means 1837, 1857, 1873 and 1893 and worse.

But after a few months, when our foreign competitors have gained our markets and closed our mills, prices will quickly go up, we shall be at the mercy of the foreigner. We will not buy so much, for suddenly we will have become a poor, incomeless people, paying the price of folly, so far as we have anything with which to pay. This is no economic doctrine, it is practical result. We have tried it, we have had the real genuine experience, not once, but several times. Are we going to try it again? The election on November 8 will tell the tale. A Democratic house of representatives will be the first step, as it was in 1890. Then if we repeat the result of 1892 in 1912 we may look for worse financial and industrial conditions than we have ever known.

On the other hand the election of a Republican house of representatives next month means two years more at least of sound stable business conditions. It means confidence and willingness to invest. It means work and good wages for all. If it is found that any item or schedule of the tariff is operating to the injury of any industry or section then it will be changed by protectionists and friends of an adequate tariff instead of those who threaten to close every custom house in the land.

Democrats Without Standing.

Neither in Maine nor anywhere else has there been anything like a definite statement of what the Democratic party stands for. No one has the slightest idea of what is the orthodox Democratic attitude toward even the tariff question. As to the regulation of interstate corporations, the Democrats of both senate and house have found fault with the Republicans because they didn't go far enough or fast enough. Champ Clark, of Missouri, marked for the speakership if the Democrats control the house, is an old Bryanite and altogether out of sympathy with the Cleveland elements in his party. His chief political occupation is to rage against the money powers, and he fills his speeches with denunciation of the "special interests." But this, of course, may be only heat lightning. No one knows, and consequently no one can tell.

Getting Down to the Facts.

"Our Democratic friends are saying that if the Democratic party comes into power it would reduce the expense of this government $300,000,000," says the president. "Do they mean that the Democrats would abolish the pension list? Do they mean that they would give up the navy and disband the army? Do they mean that they would abandon Porto Rico and the Philippines? Let us have a little specification. What are such statements worth unless the details of the expenditures that they criticise and expect to avoid if they are let into power and become themselves the national government?"

In the Same Old Plight.

Another of those coincidences which so frequently bedevil Democrats is seen in the fact that on the same day Senator Owen of Oklahoma was saying that the Democratic party must get rid of bossism and stand for the people's rule, Boss Murphy and Boss Sullivan were tightening their cinches on the New York and Illinois Democracy.

It is, as former President Roosevelt says, a record of achievement for which the Republican party asks approval this year. It is a record of promises fulfilled, of good things done.

Pinning Opponents to Facts.

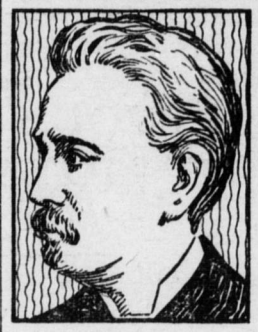
Mr. Taft's statesmanlike practicality has extended itself in his positive demand, oft repeated, for a bill of particulars regarding the evils which they claimed afflicted the country and the remedies they proposed as means of eradicating them. From first to last he has stuck to his text, which may be defined in homely, everyday English as "Tell us what is the matter and what you purpose doing about it."—Kansas City Journal.

Must Look to Republicans.

The best argument for the Republican cause in the coming campaign will be the contrast between Republican deeds and the utter improbability that the Democrats would accomplish anything if they were given control of the lower house of congress. Stagnation in public business would be the natural result. The real promise of progress is in the Republican party—a fact as clear to Theodore Roosevelt as it is to William H. Taft.—Cleveland Leader.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

PRESIDENT OF PORTUGAL



Theophile Braga, provisional president of Portugal, in an interview, emphasizes what he calls the "philosophical" source of the revolution.

The men who have been spreading the doctrines of republicanism, he says, are professors, mathematicians, writers and generally men of learning. The result, he thinks, is, first of all, a victory for the cause of "education"—an effort to restore the Portuguese people to the intellectual rank lost for so long a time.

"It is our aim," he says, "to show the Portuguese as a race of the elite, both physically and intellectually. It is our greatest honor by an admirable revolution to demonstrate to the world that the Portuguese are worthy of their ancestors."

From the names announced of the provisional government the "intellectuals," the idealist republicans who dream of making Portugal worthy of her former glory, have carried through this movement, or at any rate are for the moment in control. Putting Theophile Braga, the one Portuguese scholar of international reputation, at their head, is a shrewd move on the part of the revolutionists. It follows the curious Latin fashion of bestowing political power on literary men, but it also declares to Europe that the true men of progress, the men of education and of position, are directing the revolution, and not the street rabble of Lisbon. Among Senhor Braga's colleagues are many college professors, while military and naval men are noticeably absent.

Dr. Theophile Braga is a man about fifty-five years old and a graduate of a leading European university. He began the practise of medicine in Lisbon when a young man and has been prominent throughout Portugal for many years past.

About three years ago Dr. Braga identified himself with the intellectual wing of the Republican party and became president of the committee of seven of that organization. In this office he wielded great political power, and his undoubted honesty and well-known integrity won many supporters for the party which was destined to obtain control of affairs. He was long associated with Dr. Bernardino Machado, one of the foremost professors of the Lisbon university.

LEADS NEW YORK DEMOCRATS

John A. Dix, the Democratic nominee for governor in New York, is a prosperous business man and interested in various corporations. He was born at Glens Falls in 1860. He was educated at the academy there, and entered Cornell university in the class of 1883, but left in his junior year. In 1889 he married Miss Gertrude Allen Thomson, the daughter of a lumber merchant. He began his business career as a member of the firm of Reynolds & Dix, dealers in black marble, and later became associated with Lemont Thomson in the lumber business.

Mr. Dix is not unfamiliar with politics, however, being chairman of the Democratic state committee and a former candidate for lieutenant-governor, when he ran with Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler in 1908. Even prior to that time, in 1906, when William R. Hearst was nominated for governor at Buffalo the name of John A. Dix went before the convention and he received some complimentary votes.

Mr. Dix comes of a noted family and is a great-grandnephew of Gen. John A. Dix, former Republican governor of the state, who while serving as secretary of the treasury early in 1861, issued the famous order, familiar since from ocean to ocean: "If any man attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot." Mr. Dix is heavily interested in wall paper factories and also in lumbering and banking and has had a successful business career.

His work in creating a county chairman's organization won him the nomination for lieutenant-governor two years ago. He favored them, and does now, a system whereby the power of the county chairman should be more absolute than at present.

After his unsuccessful campaign two years ago Mr. Dix certified to the secretary of state that he contributed $3,983.50 for campaign expenses, of which $2,500 went to the state committee.

IS ESTEEMED BY QUEEN MARY

The beautiful Lady Lister-Kaye, who was Natica Yznaga, the youngest of the three charming Yznaga sisters of New York, is one American resident in England who need have no fear for her position in society or of her reception by royalty. For some time speculation has been rife as to the social fate of the American women in King George's reign. There is a general feeling that for a while at least they will be much less conspicuous at court than they were during the late King Edward's regime. However, Lady Lister-Kaye is sure of her standing and knows that she will be quite welcome at Buckingham palace.

This gracious daughter of America is a sister of the late Dowager Duchess of Manchester (Consuelo Yznaga), who was one of King Edward's most esteemed confidants and with whom her friendship was of long duration. Unlike many of the late ruler's associates the dowager duchess was a close friend of Queen Alexandra and held a prominent place in all things social in the royal set. Lady Lister-Kaye was not only highly regarded by the late king and Queen Alexandra, but she has enjoyed the warm friendship of Queen Mary for several years, which is somewhat unusual, as Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra have few friends in common. While the queen was princess of Wales she honored this American woman conspicuously by dining in her home several times. Beyond these personal ties is the fact that her husband, Sir John Lister-Kaye, is a groom-in-waiting upon King George.

Though certain of the residents in the American colony in London may not be in first favor in royal society this winter, Lady Lister-Kaye will not be denied her position and, as has been the case for many years past, a member of the Yznaga family will be prominent in the social affairs of royalty.

LOS ANGELES TIMES' OWNER

Gen. Harrison Gray Otis is the owner and editor of the Los Angeles Times, the building and plant of which was recently wrecked by an explosion attributed to enemies of the paper.

General Otis was born near Marietta, Ohio, February 10, 1837. With the breaking out of the Civil war he enlisted as a private in the Twelfth Ohio infantry, June 25, 1861. He was made a second lieutenant November 12, 1862, and a first lieutenant May 20, 1863. He was transferred to the Twenty-third Ohio infantry July 1, 1864, and made a captain July 25, 1864. He was breveted a major and lieutenant colonel March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious service during the war and was honorably mustered out July 26, 1865. He was twice wounded during the war.

In 1866-67 General Otis was official reporter for the Ohio house of representatives and was foreman of the government printing office 1868-69. During 1870 and 1876 he was chief of a division in the United States patent office, and special agent of the United States treasury in charge of the seal islands of Alaska, 1879-81.

General Otis was appointed a brigadier general of the United States volunteers May 27, 1898, and placed in command of the First brigade, Second division of the Eighth army corps, in the Philippine islands. He led the brigade at the capture of Caloocan, February 10, 1899. He was breveted a major general of volunteers March 25, 1899, and honorably discharged July 2, 1899. He entered journalism in California thirty three years ago.

The Spots Disappeared.

Mrs. Dolan lived in a district which was not as favorable for the outdoor household experiments recommended by the Ladies' Helper as it might have been. This fact Mrs. Dolan was rapidly assimilating, and in a manner not so uncommon as it might be she blamed the estimable periodical for her difficulties.

"I wisht I had a holt o' that woman that runs the 'Handy Hints' department," she remarked to her husband one morning after an early excursion into the back yard, whence she returned in high dudgeon.

"I t'ought you t'ought she was a grand wan," said Mr. Dolan, cautiously testing his cup of tea.

"Well, I've changed me mind, as I've the rights to do," replied his wife. "She said to put sody on thim stains in the tablecloth, and I've it out overnight on the line, an' they'd be gone entirely whin morning come. Sure 'tis the tablecloth that's gone—the desaving woman that she is!"—Youth's Companion.

A Logical Landlord.

Many a tenant will sympathize with the man in this story, from the Philadelphia Record. He was renting a small house which the landlord had refused to repair. One day the owner came to see him.

"Jones," he said, "I shall have to raise your rent."

"What for?" asked Jones, anxiously. "Have taxes gone up?"

"No," the landlord answered, "but I see you've painted the house and put in a new range and bathtub. That, of course, makes it worth more rent."

MODERNIZING UNCLE SAM'S BUSINESS SYSTEMS

TYPICAL "MAILING ROOM" IN A GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT. ONE OF THE CLASS OF GOVERNMENTAL INSTITUTIONS WHERE GREAT ECONOMIES ARE EXPECTED

ALTHOUGH the ensuing season will be in one sense what is known as an off-year in governmental activities, owing to the fact that there will be a "short session" instead of a "long session" of congress, there will be inaugurated several projects of far-reaching importance. Probably the most important of these new departures will be the scheme for modernizing Uncle Sam's business systems as represented in the routine of the departments at Washington and their "branch offices" scattered all over the country. This is the undertaking which is one of the pet projects of President Taft and to carry it out congress has appropriated the sum of $100,000.

SEN. ALDRICH: HE SAYS THE GOVERNMENT COULD SAVE $300,000,000 A YEAR ON ITS METHOD OF DOING BUSINESS

Every since he entered the White House President Taft has been imbued with the conviction that the machinery of government could be operated at much less expense than has been the case for years past. Among practical business men the Federal government's wasteful and costly method of carrying on its business has for years been at once a joke and a reproach and Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island voiced the general opinion when he recently declared that he could administer the affairs of the biggest business institution on the continent and by the introduction of modern methods and policies save fully $300,000,000 a year over the present cost.

The recent legislation by congress was designed merely to enable the president to start the ball rolling for reform in the conduct of the Federal business. With $100,000 set aside to inaugurate the work, the president is authorized to employ accountants and experts from official and private life and to inquire into every phase of the methods of transacting the public business of the government in the several executive departments and other governmental establishments. It is expected that many of the recommendations for reforms which will be made by these business physicians can be carried out promptly with no other authority than the order of the president, but where congressional action is necessary there is assurance that it will be forthcoming.

The president has placed this entire overhauling of the governmental business systems in the hands of his very capable new secretary, Mr. Charles D. Norton, who had quite an interval of experience as assistant secretary of the treasury before coming to his present post and who while in that department inaugurated the "house cleaning" of the treasury's business systems which became in effect the forerunner of the broad rejuvenation that is now to sweep the entire Federal establishment. Mr. Norton has invited the leading experts in the country, including such authorities on the subject as Maj. Charles Hine, the reorganization experts of the Harriman lines, to submit written programs for governmental business reorganization and from these propositions he will select plans, to be carried out. It is the supposition that Mr. Norton's private business experience as the proprietor of one of the largest general insurance agencies in the country for years before he entered the government service will stand him in good stead in selecting improved business systems for the government.

While Mr. Norton will have the general direction of the new project he will have the assistance of a board of directors, as it were—a commission composed of one executive officer from each department and independent bureau at Washington and this commission will co-operate with the experts in bringing about the big reform. The present movement, it may be added, is not designed so much to enable the cuttinff off of a clerk here and there—although doubtless many clerks will be retired as a result of its economies—as to formulate an entirely new structure of business methods.

Several of the government departments have started on overhauling of their business systems without waiting for the general reconstruction and what has been accomplished thus in piece-meal fashion gives a forecast of what may be expected later. In the U. S. land office, for instance, bookkeeping methods have been so simplified that a single volume now holds the records that formerly required twenty-one different books. In one office 16 standard printed forms now do the work that formerly necessitated 83 different documents and in the postoffice department $175,000 a year is being saved in twine bills by means of a new tying device. Incidently it may be noted that some of the most radical economies that are expected as a result of Uncle Sam's latest move are looked for in the mailing rooms of the departments where tons of government documents are wrapped, addressed and mailed each day.

Belfast's Great Shipyard

IN MANY respects Messrs Harland & Wolff's shipyard, Queen's Island, Belfast, is the most remarkable concern of the kind in the world. For many years past they have taken the lead in the construction of the largest ships afloat; they have cut two of the finest liners on the seas in twain, and added considerable to their dimensions; and they have built half a vessel, the stern half, and had it towed safely from Belfast to Southampton, where it was built into the other half. At present on the stocks of their North yard two mammoth White Star boats of 45,000 tons each are fast approaching the launching stage. This line's entire fleet has been built by Messrs. Harland & Wolff.

From the available record it appears that the first Belfast built ship was a wooden schooner of 150 tons, the builder being a local Presbyterian clergyman. This was in 1836, but it was not until 1850 any serious attempt was made in the shipbuilding line so far as Belfast was concerned. In that year Messrs. Thomas Barnes & Co., in addition to starting the Belfast iron works, erected a small slip on the now famous Queen's Island, which has long since lost its insular position though still retaining the name which was given it after the late Queen Victoria's visit in 1849, previous to which it was known as Dargan's Island. The ironworks proved a failure, owing to the heavy expenses incurred in bringing the coal and iron stone to Belfast, but the small shipyard thrived exceedingly under the supervision of Messrs. Robert Hickson & Co., who acquired it from its founders.

Mr. Edward J. Harland, an Englishman, was manager for Messrs. Hickson, and in 1859 he purchased the concern from Messrs. Hickson, as well as a small yard adjoining, belonging to the Belfast Shipbuilding company, where wooden vessels only were built. Two years later Mr. Harland was joined in partnership with Mr. Gustavius Wilhelm Wolff, a wealthy German, and in 1874 Messrs. Walter H. Wilson (deceased) and William James Pierre (now Lord Pierre), pupils of the firm, were also made partners in the concern, which was subsequently floated as a limited liability company.

The business of the firm from the very outset continued to increase by leaps and bounds. In the year 1884, exactly 15 years after Mr. Harland acquired the controlling interest in the concern, there were launched from the Queen's Island yard 42 vessels, aggregating 105,625 tons burden. In the three years ending 1890 their total was 31 vessels, of 126,175 tons. On three ocasions since they have achieved the record 12 months world's output, the figures being: In 1907, 82,240 tons; in 1903, 110,000 tons, and in 1908, 106,528 tons.

But perhaps one of the longest of several very tough tasks undertaken by the firm of Harland & Wolff was the lengthening of the Castle line Royal Mail steamer Scot (now the Oceana, of the Dutch Red Star fleet). It was in 1896 that the Scot, a Greenock-built steamer of some seven or eight thousand tons, was sent to Belfast to have 50 feet added to her length amidship. Messrs. Harland & Wolff undertook the job. The vessel was cut in halves, and with the aid of powerful jacks the two ends were pulled the required distance apart. Each end was several thousand tons dead weight, yet the work was accomplished without hitch or accident of any kind to the complete satisfaction of the owners. Towards the end of the same year the Hamburg-American liner Augusta Victoria was similarly lengthened by 60 feet.

Still more remarkable, probably, was the building of the bow portion of the rejuvenated White Star liner Suevic, when that vessel was taken piecemeal off the rocks at the entrance to the English channel some four or five years ago. The stern portion only was saved and brought round to Southampton, where it remained until Messrs. Harland & Wolff built the bow end, 260 feet long, in the south yard, subsequently, with the aid of three Liverpool tugs, bringing the weird looking half ship right down the Irish channel, round the Land's end, and up to Southampton.

The repairs to the China, of the P. and O. line, and the Paris, of the American line, were also remarkable undertakings, as was also that of the St. Louis for the latter company. The China.

It was in 1870 the first Oceanic was built on the Queen's Island for the White Star company. It was a vessel considerably under 1,000 tons. The second Oceanic, launched in 1892, has 18 times the tonnage almost, while even up till the present day no one outside the management of the firm, with the exception of the heads of the White Star company, knows the exact dimensions of the two giant boats now being built for this great ocean carrying firm, so well has the secret been guarded. That they will be between 820 and 840 feet in length, and of about 45,000 registered tonnage, is the extent of knowledge of the outside public regarding these monsters.

The firm can in no sense be regarded as builders for speed, elegance and comfort for ocean voyagers being their especial motto. None of the boats built by them is intended to exced 21 knots or 21½ knots, which, it is understood, will be the rate of traveling of the coming White Star leviathans, the motive power of which will be on the combination principle of reciprocating turbine engines. At the present moment between 11,000 and 12,000 employees are in constant employment, working at high pressure night and day shift, and receiving wages to the tune of ever £20,000 per week, while the area of the concern is about 120 acres.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Cruise of World for Naval Cadets

WASHINGTON.—The fighting ships are going on another cruise, partly fo rthe sake of the cruise and partly to advertise the navy and attract young men to it. Sixteen of the battleships will turn their prows away from the home land and steam off into the Atlantic, bound on a tour of the European ports.

For months the publicity experts of the navy department have been exploiting the voyage for the purpose of getting young men to recruit. Not all of them will be chosen to go, but they all have an equal chance and those who do not go this time will go the next time, for it is the purpose to have these cruises every year to make the service more atractive to young Americans and cause them to enlist in such numbers as are required for the proper manning of the fighting ships.

When this cruise was first announced, several months ago, the navy department issued advertising matter to draw recruits. One of its most effective documents was a circular letter, prepared at Washington, but sent out from the various recruiting stations. It was written in a heart-to-heart style. The cruise meant, according to the letter-writer, "that thousands of young Americans will have a chance to see the world and get paid for it. Do people who save for months or years to go abroad ever regret it? I want to ask you this important question: Are you willing to travel if you are well paid for it, or would you rather stay at home and read about it?"

Naturally, when it is put up to him in that fetching fashion, the young man concludes that he would a good deal rather travel and get paid for it, and he hies to the nearest recruiting station and enlists. Long cruises cost a lot of money, but they bring in young men and the navy must have young men even if they do come high.

Another heart-to-heart letter is addressed to the young man who is tired of his job. "Perhaps you are unhappy in your present job," writes the recruiting officer. "Perhaps it doesn't pay you enough. Perhaps there is no future to it. Perhaps your present work will never satisfy your burning ambition to win great success. Well, now if you want to change your job, I'd like to have a talk with you and tell you all about a bluejacket's life in the navy."

If the young man isn't tired of his job that letter is calculated to make him tired of it, and the navy gets another man. Other appeals are made, but the cruise talks are what bring the best results.

Put Under Bonds to Keep the Peace

MEXICO is a striking illustration of the way modern business puts nations under bonds to keep the peace. A naturally turbulent Latin-American republic, mainly Indian in blood, pays coupons on its government bonds to citizens of 21 nations. That is the number of countries represented last year. In 1907, coupons on Mexican government bonds were redeemed for citizens of 16 nations.

Every country so interested, through its citizens, in the stability and honesty of the Mexican republic, is an influence on the side of peace and order in Mexico. In a very real sense the Mexican nation has given bonds to keep the peace by selling government securities to foreigners living under many flags.

Less directly, but still in ways that count heavily the sales of private property to foreign investors are also equivalent to giving bonds to keep the peace. In the last quarter of a century American capital to the amount of not less than $1,000,000,000, according to excellent authorities, has been invested in Mexican mines, plantations, railroads and other Mexican property. European money has poured into Mexico in a similar stream.

Of course, no Mexican government ever guaranteed the security or the profitableness of such investments. No government of any great power would undertake to collect from the Mexican people, as a nation, money to make good the losses sustained by Americans, making unwise investments in Mexico. It is not a question of such compulsion.

But every power which has many subjects who have staked money upon the stability of the Mexican republic, the justice and solidity of the Mexican government, and the general sanity and regard for business obligations of the Mexican nation, will exert more or less pressure upon Mexico if that country should ever default as a nation or encourage its citizens to refuse to pay their just debts. In the aggregate these forces brought to bear upon Mexico can be trusted to have a deep and wide influence there.

Such international business bonds of peace are constantly becoming more important in many parts of the world. Every year the financial and commercial ties which knit the nations together increase in strength. Always the tendency of the times is toward the creation of closer international relations and a surer sense of common interest in the preservation of peace.

Bank Failures Due to Lax Examiners

CLOSE upon the heels of the radical shake-up in the ranks of the United States bank examiners, by which 20 men were shifted to new fields, Controller of Currency Murray announces that he will make a personal investigation of conditions in all examination districts. In deciding upon this course of action the controller says:

"In almost every case of a national bank failure since I have been controller the insolvency could have been averted had the national bank examiner determined the true condition and reported his findings in time for me to force a correction in the administration of the bank's affairs."

After citing that examiners of failed banks had offered excuses that they had been unable to learn in advance of a bank's true condition, that officers and directors of banks would not correct conditions brought to their attention, or any one of another dozen reasons, Mr. Murray in his statement says:

"Many of the examiners state in their reports of examinations, forwarded to the controller's office, that it is a hardship not only on the examiner but upon many of the members of the directory of country banks, to ask the various boards to meet with the examiner during the progress or at the close of the examination.

"This investigation by the controller and his chief of the division of reports is also an investigation into the methods employed by every national bank examiner, and upon seeing them make an examination of several banks and afterward holding a meeting of the directors, he will be able to determine who of his examining force, if any, are inefficient."

Want to Shorten 'Long Green' Notes

THE length and breadth of the paper money issued by the government are not fixed by statute, but by habit the notes are 3.04 inches long and 7.28 inches wide. The treasury department renews the plan more than once proposed before to reduce these dimensions. The size talked about is 2.5 inches by six inches, which has for some time been used with favor in the Philippines. Our people are familiar with the notes as they are and tills have been fitted to them. But traders and bankers handled the fractional currency of war times with ease and that paper was smaller than that the treasury is now considering.

The cost of the change would be in providing an entire new series of plates and that would be much greater than the renewal of such as wear out. On the other hand the experts reckon that a saving of $612,603 a year may be made by the reduction in size. The secretary will ask congress to conform the bank bills to the new dimensions at government charge for new plates.

The work of so modifying the paper currency would require 18 months, so that no sudden appearance of the smaller notes can be expected. While engravers and printers might be busy, the scheme would pass into an old story.

The department hesitates to go forward in the matter without public approval and invites criticism and suggestion. The clipping off of more than half an inch in width and 1.28 inch in length saves so much in paper and permits five notes instead of four to be printed on a sheet. The guess how much longer the smaller note will last than the present paper can be verified only by trial.

"5-DROPS" taken internally, rids the blood of the poisonous matter and acids which are the direct causes of these diseases. DR. S. D. BLAND
Of Brewton, Ga., writes:
"I had been a sufferer for a number of years with Lumbago and Rheumatism in my arms and legs, and tried all the remedies that I could gather from medical works, and also consulted with a number of the best physicians, but found nothing that gave the relief obtained from "5-DROPS." I shall prescribe it in my practice for rheumatism and kindred disease."

Mrs. A. Extrom, Sixth street, Emporium, Pa., says: "I do not hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for they did me a world of good. Nothing gave me relief until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from Taggart's Drug Store. They proved to be just the remedy I needed and the contents of three or four boxes restored me to good health."

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madson, of West Burlington, Iowa, when, after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this matchless medicine completely cured him. It's positively guaranteed for Stomach, Liver or Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c. at all druggists.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

ILLUSTRATIONS BY REY WALTERS

SYNOPSIS.

Miss Innes, spinster and guardian of Gertrude and Halsey, established summer headquarters at Sunnyside. The servants desert. Gertrude and Halsey arrive with Jack Bailey. The house was awakened by a revolver shot and Arnold Armstrong was found shot to death in the hall. Miss Innes found Halsey's revolver on the lawn. He and Jack Bailey had disappeared. Gertrude revealed that she was engaged to Jack Bailey, with whom she talked in the billiard room shortly before the murder. Detective Jamieson accused Miss Innes of holding back evidence. He imprisoned an intruder in an empty room. The prisoner escaped. Gertrude was suspected because of an injured foot. Halsey reappears and says he and Bailey were called away by a telegram. Cashier Bailey of Paul Armstrong's bank, defunct, was arrested for embezzlement. Paul Armstrong's death was announced. Halsey's fiancee, Louise Armstrong, told Halsey that while she still loved him, she was to marry another. It developed that Dr. Walker was the man. Louise was found at the bottom of the circular staircase. Recovering consciousness, she said something had brushed by her on the stairway and she fainted. Bailey is suspected of Armstrong's murder. After "seeing a ghost," Thomas, the lodgekeeper, was found dead with a slip in his pocket bearing the name of "Lucien Wallace." Dr. Walker asked Miss Innes to vacate in favor of Mrs. Armstrong. She refused. A note from Bailey to Gertrude arranging a meeting at night was found. A ladder out of place deepens the mystery.

It Went Off, Right Through the Door.

Apparently only a few minutes elapsed, during which my eyes were becoming accustomed to the darkness. Then I noticed that the windows were reflecting a faint pinkish light; Liddy noticed it at the same time, and I heard her jump up. At that moment Sam's deep voice boomed from somewhere just below.

"Fire!" he yelled. "The stable's on fire!"

I could see him in the glare dancing up and down on the drive, and a moment later Halsey joined him. Alex was awake and running down the stairs, and in five minutes from the time the fire was discovered three of the maids were sitting on their trunks in the drive, although, excepting a few sparks, there was no fire nearer than 100 yards.

Gertrude seldom loses her presence of mind, and she ran to the telephone. But by the time the Casanova volunteer fire department came toiling up the hill the stable was a furnace, with the Dragon Fly safe but blistered, in the road. Some gasoline exploded just as the volunteer department got to work, which shook their nerves as well as the burning building. The stable, being on a hill, was a torch to attract the population from every direction.

The stable was off the west wing. I hardly know how I came to think of the circular staircase and the unguarded door at its foot. Liddy was putting my clothes into sheets, preparatory to tossing them out the window, when I found her, and I could hardly persuade her to stop.

"I want you to come with me, Liddy," I said. "Bring a candle and a couple of blankets."

She lagged behind considerably when she saw me making for the east wing, and at the top of the staircase she balked.

"I am not going down there," she said firmly.

"There is no one guarding the door down there," I explained. "Who knows?—this may be a scheme to draw everybody away from this end of the house, and let some one in here."

The instant I had said it I was convinced I had hit on the explanation, and that perhaps it was already too late. It seemed to me as I listened that I heard stealthy footsteps on the east porch, but there was so much shouting outside that it was impossible to tell. Liddy was on the point of retreat.

"Very well," I said, "then I shall go down alone. Run back to Mr. Halsey's room and get his revolver. Don't shoot down the stairs if you hear a noise; remember—I shall be down there. And hurry."

I put the candle on the floor at the top of the staircase and took off my bedroom slippers. Then I crept down the stairs, going very slowly, and listening with all my ears. Just at the foot of the stairs I stubbed my toe against Halsey's big chair, and had to stand on one foot in a soundless agony until the pain subsided to a dull ache. And then—I knew I was right. Some one had put a key into the lock, and was turning it. For some reason it refused to work, and the key was withdrawn. There was a muttering of voices outside; I had only a second. Another trial, and the door would open. The candle above made a faint gleam down the well-like staircase, and at that moment, with a second, no more, to spare, I thought of a plan.

The heavy oak chair almost filled the space between the newel post and the door. With a crash I had turned it on its side, wedging it against the door, its legs against the stairs. I [illegible] ear a faint scream from Liddy [illegible]sh and then she came down [illegible] a run, with the revolver [illegible]t in front of her.

[illegible]e said, in a shaking [illegible]t it was you."

[illegible]s door, and she un-

[illegible]e windows at the [illegible]ouse," I whispered. [illegible]ot to wait for any-

She went up the stairs at that, two at a time. Evidently she collided with the candle, for it went out, and I was left in darkness.

I was really astonishingly cool. I remember stepping over the chair and gluing my ear to the door, and I shall never forget feeling it give an inch or two there in the darkness, under a steady pressure from without. But the chair held, although I could hear an ominous cracking of one of the legs. And then, without the slightest warning, the cardroom window broke with a crash. I had my finger on the trigger of the revolver, and as I jumped it went off, right through the door. Some one outside swore roundly, and for the first time I could hear what was said.

"Only a scratch. . . . Men are at the other end of the house. . . . Have the whole rat's nest on us." And a lot of profanity which I won't write down. The voices were at the broken window now, and although I was trembling violently, I was determined that I would hold them until help came. I moved up the stairs until I could see into the cardroom, or rather through it, to the window. As I looked a small man put his leg over the sill and stepped into the room. The curtain confused him for a moment; then he turned, not toward me, but toward the billiard room door. I fired again, and something that was glass or china crashed to the ground. Then I ran up the stairs and along the corridor to the main staircase. Gertrude was standing there, trying to locate the shots, and I must have been a peculiar figure, with my hair in crimps, my dressing-gown flying, no slippers, and a revolver clutched in my hand. I had no time to talk. There was the sound of footsteps in the lower hall, and some one bounded up the stairs.

I had gone Berserk, I think. I leaned over the stair-rail and fired again. Halsey, below, yelled at me.

"What are you doing up there?" he yelled. "You missed me by an inch."

And then I collapsed and fainted. When I came around Liddy was rubbing my temples with eau de quinine, and the search was in full blast.

Well, the man was gone. The stable burned to the ground, while the crowd cheered at every falling rafter, and the volunteer fire department sprayed it with a garden hose. And in the house Alex and Halsey searched every corner of the lower floor, finding no one.

The truth of my story was shown by the broken window and the overturned chair. That the unknown had got upstairs was almost impossible. He had not used the main staircase, there was no way to the upper floor in the east wing, and Liddy had been at the window, in the west wing, where the servants' stair went up. But we did not go to bed at all. Sam Bohannon and Warner helped in the search, and not a closet escaped scrutiny. Even the cellars were given a thorough overhauling, without result. The door in the east entry had a hole through it where my bullet had gone. The hole slanted downward, and the bullet was embedded in the porch. Some reddish stains showed it had done execution.

"Somebody will walk lame," Halsey said, when he had marked the course of the bullet. "It's too low to have hit anything but a leg or foot."

From that time on I watched every person I met for a limp, and to this day the man who halts in his walk is an object of suspicion to me. But Casanova had no lame men; the nearest approach to it was an old fellow who tended the safety gates at the railroad, and he, I learned on inquiry, had two artificial legs. Our man had gone, and the large and expensive stable at Sunnyside was a heap of smoking rafters and charred boards. Warner swore the fire was incendiary, and in view of the attempt to enter the house, there seemed to be no doubt of it.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Flinders.

If Halsey had only taken me fully into his confidence through the whole affair it would have been much simpler. If he had been altogether frank about Jack Bailey, and if the day after the fire he had told me what he suspected, there would have been no harrowing period for all of us, with the boy in danger. But young people refuse to profit by the experience of their elders, and sometimes the elders are the ones to suffer.

I was much used up the day after the fire, and Gertrude insisted on my going out. The machine was temporarily out of commission, and the carriage horses had been sent to a farm for the summer. Gertrude finally got a trap from the Casanova liveryman, and we went out. Just as we turned from the drive into the road we passed a woman. She had put down a small valise, and stood inspecting the house and grounds minutely. I should hardly have noticed her had it not been for the fact that she had been horribly disfigured by smallpox.

"Ugh!" Gertrude said, when we had passed, "what a face! I shall dream of it to-night. Get up, Flinders."

"Flinders?" I asked. "Is that the horse's name?"

"It is." She flicked the horse's stubby mane with the whip. "He didn't look like a livery horse, and the liveryman said he had bought him from the Armstrongs when they purchased a couple of motors and cut down the stable. Nice Flinders—good old boy!"

Flinders was certainly not a common name for a horse, and yet the youngster at Richfield had named his prancing, curly-haired little horse Flinders! It set me to thinking.

At my request Halsey had already sent word of the fire to the agent from whom me had secured the house. Also, he had called Mr. Jamieson by telephone, and somewhat guardedly had told him of the previous night's events. Mr. Jamieson promised to come out that night, and to bring another man with him. I did not consider it necessary to notify Mrs. Armstrong, in the village. No doubt she knew of the fire, and in view of my refusal to give up the house an interview would probably have been unpleasant enough. But as we passed Dr. Walker's white and green house I thought of something.

"Stop here, Gertrude," I said. "I am going to get out."

"To see Louise?" she asked.

"No, I want to ask this young Walker something."

She was curious, I knew, but I did not wait to explain. I went up the walk to the house, where a brass sign at the side announced the office, and went in. The reception room was empty, but from the consultation room beyond came the sound of two voices, not very amicable.

"It is an outrageous figure," some one was storming. Then the doctor's quiet tone, evidently not arguing, merely stating something. But I had not time to listen to some person probably disputing his bill, so I coughed. The voices ceased at once; a door closed somewhere, and the doctor entered from the hall of the house. He looked sufficiently surprised at seeing me.

"Good afternoon, doctor," I said formally. "I shall not keep you from your patient. I wish merely to ask a question."

"Won't you sit down?"

"It will not be necessary. Doctor, has any one come to you, either early this morning or to-day, to have you treat a bullet wound?"

"Nothing so startling has happened to me," he said. "A bullet wound! Things must be lively at Sunnyside."

"I didn't say it was at Sunnyside. But as it happens, it was. If any such case comes to you, will it be too much trouble for you to let me know?"

"I shall be only too happy," he said. "I understand you have had a fire up there, too. A fire and shooting in one night is rather lively for a quiet place like that."

"It is as quiet as a boiler-shop," I replied, as I turned to go.

"And you are still going to stay?"

"Until I am burned out," I responded. And then, on my way down the steps, I turned around suddenly.

"Doctor," I asked at a venture, "have you ever heard of a child named Lucien Wallace?"

Clever as he was, his face changed and stiffened. He was on his guard again in a moment.

"Lucien Wallace?" he repeated. "No, I think not. There are plenty of Wallaces around, but I don't know any Lucien."

I was as certain as possible that he did. People do not lie readily to me, and this man lied beyond a doubt. But there was nothing to be gained now; his defenses were up, and I left, half irritated and wholly baffled.

Our reception was entirely different at Dr. Stewart's. Taken into the bosom of the family at once, Flinders tied outside and nibbling the grass at the roadside, Gertrude and I drank some home-made elderberry wine and told briefly of the fire. Of the more serious part of the night's experience, of course, we said nothing. But when at last we had left the family on the porch and the good doctor was untying our steed, I asked him the same question I had put to Dr. Walker.

"Shot!" he said. "Bless my soul, no. Why, what have you been doing up at the big house, Miss Innes?"

"Some one tried to enter the house during the fire, and was shot and slightly injured," I said hastily. "Please don't mention it; we wish to make as little of it as possible."

There was one other possibility, and we tried that. At Casanova station I saw the station master, and asked him if any trains left Casanova between one o'clock and daylight. There was none until 6 a. m. The next question required more diplomacy.

"Did you notice on the six o'clock train any person—any man—who limped a little?" I asked. "Please try to remember; we are trying to trace a man who was seen loitering around Sunnyside last night before the fire."

He was all attention in a moment.

"I was up there myself at the fire," he said volubly. "I'm a member of the volunteer company. First big fire we've had since the summer house burned over to the club golf links. My wife was sayin' the other day, 'Dave, you might as well 'a' saved the money in that there helmet and shirt.' And here last night they came in handy. Rang that bell so hard I hadn't time scarcely to get 'em on."

"And—did you see a man who limped?" Gertrude put in, as he stopped for breath.

"Not at the train, ma'm," he said. "No such person got on here to-day. But I'll tell you where I did see a man that limped. I didn't wait till the company left; there's a fast freight goes through at 4:45, and I had to get down to the station. I seen there wasn't much more to do anyhow at the fire—we'd got the flames under control"—Gertrude looked at me and smiled—"so I started down the hill. There was folk here and there goin' home, and along by the path to the Country club I seen two men. One was a short fellow. He was sitting on a big rock, his back to me, and he had something white in his hand, as if he was tying up his foot. After I'd gone on a piece I looked back, and he was hobbling on and—excuse me, miss—he was swearing something sickening."

Marvels of Modern Surgery.

Knife operations on the stomach have given a death rate of from one to 20 per cent., against 20 to 40 per cent. ten years ago. Cutting open the upper abdomen, splitting the stomach open and turning it wrong side out, searching for cancers and ulcers, has become a not uncommon operation, often followed by great cures and benefits, and is largely an American specialty. — New York Press.

Completely Pauperized.

Albert W. Hebbard, New York's charity expert, said at a recent dinner:

"The great danger of charity is its pauperizing effect. This effect must be avoided, or the recipients will all become Jack Hanches.

"Jack Hanch, on the score of bad health never worked, and the pastor of the Methodist church, a man whose heart sometimes outran his head, sent the idler and his family weekly gifts of food and clothing—supported the whole crew, in fact.

"A church visitor, after listening to Jack's complaints one day, said:

"'Yes, of course, you have had bad health, we know that; but one thing at least you ought to be thankful for, and that is our pastor's kindness in sending you all this bread and meat and jelly and blankets and so on. Don't you think it is good of him to look after you so well?"

"'Good of him?' said Jack, impatiently. 'Why, what's he for?'"

Fable of Pan of Biscuits.

A Vassar girl married a Kansas farmer.

Two weeks later a cyclone made the happy pair a friendly call.

It cavorted around the premises, ripping up the fences, scattering the haystacks and playing horse with the barn, but when it looked through the open window it drew back in alarm.

There lay the bride's first pan of biscuits.

"I ain't feelin' very strong this morning," murmured the cyclone.

And with another glance at the terrible pan it blew itself away.

Wrong Guess.

It was exhibition day at No. 3, and as the parents of Jack Grady, the dullest pupil, were listening hopefully, the teacher tried her best to help the boy. "How did Charles I. of England die?" she asked, assigning the easiest question on her list to Jack. As he looked at her, with no indication of a coming answer, the teacher put her hand up to her neck. Jack saw the movement and understood its meaning, as he thought. "Charles I. of England died of cholera," he announced briskly.—Youth's Companion.

Deadlock.

"Who is that man who has been sitting behind the bar day after day?" inquired the stranger in Crimson Gulch.

"That's Stage Coach Charley. He's in a peculiar predicament. He went to town last week and got his teeth fixed. Then he came here, and, bein' broke, ran up a bill on the strength of his seven dollars' worth of gold fillin'. Charley won't submit to havin' the nuggets pried out an' the proprietor won't let him git away with the collateral, and there you are!"

WISE WORDS.
A Physician on Food.

A physician, of Portland, Oregon, has views about food. He says:

"I have always believed that the duty of the physician does not cease with treating the sick, but that we owe it to humanity to teach them how to protect their health, especially by hygienic and dietetic laws.

"With such a feeling as to my duty I take great pleasure in saying to the public that in my own experience and also from personal observation I have found no food equal to Grape-Nuts, and that I find there is almost no limit to the great benefits this food will bring when used in all cases of sickness and convalescence.

"It is my experience that no physical condition forbids the use of Grape-Nuts. To persons in health there is nothing so nourishing and acceptable to the stomach, especially at breakfast, to start the machinery of the human system on the day's work.

"In cases of indigestion I know that a complete breakfast can be made of Grape-Nuts and cream and I think it is not advisable to overload the stomach at the morning meal. I also know the great value of Grape-Nuts when the stomach is too weak to digest other food.

NATURAL ACT FOR MOTHER

Women Understand That Not Heroism but Simply Love Prompted Self Sacrifice.

A few days ago, in a somewhat squalid neighborhood, a house caught fire. The flames shot quickly through the litter on the floor and the untidy array of clothing on the walls. A woman talking with a neighbor ran screaming to the house and without an instant's hesitation sprang through the smoking doorway into what already seemed an inferno. A moment later she staggered out, her hands and face blackened and blistered and her clothing on fire. In her arms she bore her baby, safe from harm.

The afternoon papers came out with the story, printed under headlines extolling this mother's heroism. Men read it on street cars, and as their eyes gleamed with the stirring of the spirit which leaps to greet noble deeds they said: "That woman dared to do what most men would be afraid to do." But the mothers who read it at home did not think that way. Perhaps the danger to the baby, the wrecking of the home and the burns the woman suffered brought moisture to their eyes, but to them the act was not one of heroism—it was simply what any natural mother, no matter how timid, would do under the same circumstances.—Cleveland Leader.

A handsome woman who had been so unfortunate as to find occasion to divorce not one but several husbands was returning from Nevada. In Chicago she happened to meet her first husband, for whom, by the way, she always has entertained a real affection.

"Upon my soul, if it isn't Charlie!" exclaimed the ex-wife, cordially shaking hands with the gentleman whose name she had formerly borne. "I'm awfully glad to see you, Charlie!" Then, after a wistful expression had come to and been banished from her countenance, she added:

"Old chap, I've often wondered where you were and what you were doing. It was too bad we didn't get on better together. I hope your experience hasn't been as unpleasant as mine. I'm sick and tired of marrying strangers!"

REMEMBER PISO'S for COUGHS & COLDS

Gay Winter Blossoms

THEY are enough to almost make us welcome the coming winter, those gay velvet blossoms that maids and matrons are wearing on their new millinery. Big, flat poppies, giant wild roses, the clematis and poinsettias and some blossoms that must have sprung from the brain of the flower-maker, are blooming in rich, bright colors, that will show brighter still against a background of snow.

Besides these, there are the little roses made of silk and metal tissues that are the quaintest and prettiest things the cunning of artists have done. The bright green foliage is made of satin. The tightly folded blossoms and buds are set in prim groups about crowns or in single clusters at some point on the hat. They are used on all kinds of hats, but seem at their best on those of fur. One of the handsomest turbans has a drooping brim of sealskin, a tall scant puffed crown of silver tissue and small bouquets of these silk and tinsel blossoms set about the hat at the joining of the crown and brim. They are as vivid and rich as jewels.

Milliners use satin or ribbon, panne velvet and gold or silver cloth to make them. A sudden fancy for them has sprung up and everywhere, on fine hats, they delight the admirer of real millinery art. They are expensive because they take time, and not because they consume much material. That used, however, is of the best grade in order to get best results in color.

A hat covered with white satin draped with black chiffon is shown here. Poppies of velvet in white and bright red are set about half the brim and against the crown at the left side. A bow of wide velvet ribbon is perched at the right side. This is a very handsome model and might be attempted with every chance of success, by the home milliner.

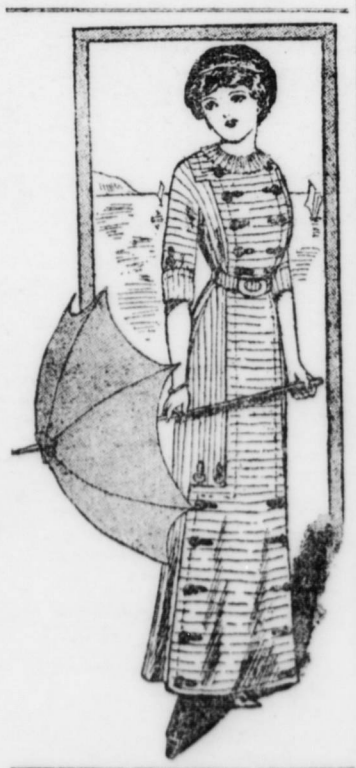
BLACK AND WHITE COSTUME

Models of Some of the Best Ideas That Have Developed During the Season.

For this costume black and white material is employed. The skirt is one of those that are not more than 2½ yards round foot.

The panel front is of black taffetas, continued in a deep band at foot; the edge is just finished by a row of machine stitching. The smart little semi-fitting jacket has no collar, but the neck and edges of fronts are outlined by a band of taffetas. Two jet buttons with cord loops form the fastening. Bands of silk also finish the wrists of the sleeves.



White chip hat, trimmed with black ribbon, white wings, and a white lace veil.

Materials required for the costume: 5 yards 44 inches checked material, 2 yards double width taffetas, 4 yards silk 22 inches wide for lining jacket, 2 buttons.

Dancing Frocks.

Dancing frocks for the smart girl are of chiffon, plain or embroidered; net, marquisette or some other soft, sheer fabric. All of these are made over linings of satin, messaline or silk. Nearly all silk frocks are veiled to soften the effect.

TO MAKE MILLINERS' FOLD

The Cutting of the Material Is the Only Thing to Be Kept in Mind.

To make a milliner's or French fold, cut the material three times the width that the fold is to be when it is finished. Then fold a third of this width back on the wrong side, and fold down over this raw edge the remaining part. Turn in the raw edge before doing this. Finally, slipstitch this edge to the thickness underneath, being careful not to let the stitches go all the way through.

To make a double fold of this sort, cut the material, again, three times the width of the fold when finished. Made a wide, plain fold, and then fold this through the center, with the stitches all on the upper edge. Place the upper fold so that it forms a cord or ridge through the center, and slipstitch this so as to hold it firmly in place. Be sure that all your stitches are out of sight.

Chic Hat for a Child.

Among the new display of fall hats for the little ones was a fine French felt, white, and in the new droopy mushroom shape. The trimming was a soft ribbon passed around the crown and held down with trim little rosettes of the ribbon, one over each ear. The left rosette was encircled by a dainty wreath of holly of the variegated kind, the soft creamy white and pale green leaves, with tiny crimson berries. The ties were of soft white ribbon, and altogether it was a most attractive bit of millinery

A Workbasket Hint.

Keep in your workbasket several large-size safety pins, and use them to string loose buttons, hooks, eyes, etc. Keep those of the same size on the same pin, black hooks on black pins, white eyes on white pins, etc. Thus you never will have an untidy workbasket, or be delayed by not being able to find instantly what you are looking for.

Fasten the safety pins to one side of the lining of your basket—and your method of securing neatness will be complete.

To Starch Linens.

In starching linens and similar goods too light for mourning starch and too dark for the white, put in the boiling starch a large piece of tissue paper in shade to match as nearly as possible the dress material. This will dissolve, and when the starch is strained, nothing but the dye will remain making a starch of the exact color desired.

This is a good hint for the woman who does much color embroidery of the stiffly starched variety.

LABOR INVOLVED MAKES DRAFT HORSES PROFITABLE

No Class of Stock Will Give Better Returns Than Animals With Weight and Quality—Care of Colt.

Prize Winning English Draft Mares.

The colt should have a roomy box stall. If you have two colts, keep them together when the mares are at work, as there is no animal that likes company better than a colt, says a writer in American Cultivator. As they get older see that they have plenty of good clover hay and bright oats to eat. It is well to have a little pasture near the barn and let them into this when the mares are at work. Have this fenced with good, woven wire, high enough so they cannot get their heads over it. The pasture should be arranged so they can run into the barn to get away from the flies. Leave the cover to the oak box open, so they can help themselves. Keep a pail of water in the stall where they can reach it. After a little you can mix skim milk with the water, later give them clear skim milk, but let them have what water they want at all times. Some colts will take skim milk at once, but be careful and not give them too much to commence with, say two quarts at first, and as they get accustomed to it you can give them five or six quarts twice a day. This you can feed all winter, and they will go on to pasture in the spring in fine shape. If they are eating oats and drinking milk at weanlag time there will be no setback, which always occurs if they are not.

When they are about a year old and on the pasture, we gradually wean them from the oats and milk, and they get nothing but pasture until fall, when they are again fed grain and hay.

We always stable all of our at night, but they have a roomy yard field to run in in the day time, so that they get plenty of exercise.

We always break our colts to harness before they are three years old. Get them used to the harness before spring work begins. Work them only half a day at a time to commence with, and see that their collars and harness fit them well.

When the weather gets warm clip your colts. By so doing you may avoid sore shoulders. If a colt gets a sore shoulder, let him rest a few days and heal it up. If you continue to work him and the sore keeps getting worse, you may have a shoulder that will always bother you when he is put to hard work.

We aim to sell all of our geldings before they are seven years old. When you intend to sell your horses see that they are in proper shape. They should be fat, as that is what the market demands. Feed them on good wholesome food; corn can be fed to quite an extent at this time, with bran and a little oil meal.

By breeding the right horses, those with weight and quality, I know of no class of stock that will bring better returns for our high-priced feeds (considering the amount of labor involved) than good draft horses.

APPLE CULLS CAUSE LOSS

It Will Prove Profitable to Squeeze Juice Out of Discards and Sell in Natural State.

(By JOHN J. TENNES.)

The amount of money lost by farmers every year through lack of interest or knowledge of the means to dispose of unmarketable apples has never been estimated. That is one of the big wastes on every farm where many apples are grown and where commercial fruit raising is made the main feature of the farm.

Even the orchardist who is in the business as a specialist must suffer more or less in his culls.

As 95 per cent. of ripe apples is juice which sells for good prices either in its natural state or as vinegar, it pays big to squeeze out this product through a press instead of allowing it to go to waste.

There are many kinds of cider presses, but an hydraulic machine extracts the very last possible drop of juice to be obtained and leaves very little substance to be thrown away.

The first advantage gained by working up unmarketable fruit into cider is that it is converted into a condensed and portable form convenient for handling and storing. The second object is to convert this valuable portion of the crop into a marketable commodity, which would otherwise be wasted and lost. The cost, the time and labor of working up several hundred bushels of apples into cider is only nominal as compared with the value of the cider itself if properly handled. Apples that have been bruised in handling are imperfectly developed, too small and gnarled apples which would not be worth the cost of packing, can be utilized in this manner and the orchardist's revenue largely enhanced. The maximum of successful financial enterprises are as applicable to the business of a practical orchardist as to any other. The little things must not be overlooked; all the byproducts must be utilized, for from them is derived much of the profit.

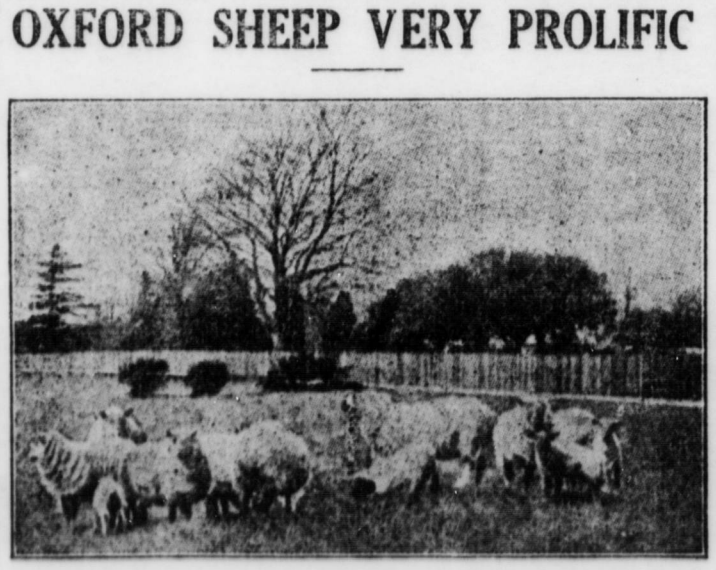
OXFORD SHEEP VERY PROLIFIC



The Oxford sheep originated in England in the early part of the nineteenth century from a cross of Cotswold and Hampshire Downs. They have been known since 1857 as Oxfordshire or Oxford Downs, and are now widely distributed over the United States and Canada. They are the largest and heaviest of the Down breeds. When in good flesh the rams should weigh 250 to 275 pounds and the ewes from 200 to 225 pounds. The wool is rather coarser than any other of the medium wool breeds and the fleece is heavier, weighing from 10 to 12 pounds unwashed. The face is usually an even dark gray or brown, with or without a gray spot on the tip of the nose. They are best adapted for lands furnishing good pasture, and do not succeed as well under range conditions or on rugged, broken pastures. The ewes are very prolific, triplets being not uncommon. The lambs grow very rapidly and are of good form. The chief shortcoming of the breed is that it is not as hardy as some others.

GOV. HARMON RE-ELECTED

Carries State of Ohio by a Majority of 60,000.

LONGWORTH IS RE-ELECTED

Ohio Republicans Go Down to Defeat After a Most Strenuous Campaign. President Taft's County Gives Harmon 15,000 Majority, While Cuyahoga Places 10,000 to Democrat's Credit—Harmon a Strong Democratic Possibility For President In 1912.

Cleveland, Nov. 9.—Governor Harmon has been re-elected governor of Ohio by about 60,000 majority.

One of the most bitter campaigns in the history of the Buckeye state closed last night. The Republicans put forth their most strenuous efforts to land their ticket on top, for the reason that a victory meant an indorsement of President Taft's administration and a defeat a slap at his policies which would be felt in this state far more than any other part of the country. But victory perched on the banner of the Democrats and Governor Harmon is one of the strongest possibilities in the Democratic ranks at the present time for the nomination for president in 1912.

Hamilton county, the home county of President Taft, gave Harmon 15,000 majority, and Cuyahoga county, not to be outdone, handed the chief executive 10,000 majority.

Election reports had not been received but a short time before it could be discerned that in the strongest Republican counties the Democrats were making abnormal gains and when Hamilton county reported 15,000 more votes for Harmon than Harding received the Republican leaders gave up all hope and became reconciled to defeat.

Governor Harmon received numerous telegrams of congratulation, the majority of them hailing him as the next president of the United States.

The Republicans lay their defeat to factional strife, while the Democrats claim victory because of the tariff and the governor's popularity with the masses of the people.

In consequence of the Democrats controlling the Ohio legislature a Democratic successor will be chosen to replace Senator Dick.

The Harmon landslide in Cuyahoga will probably defeat Congressmen Cassidy and Howland.

Nick Longworth, Roosevelt's son-in-law, has been returned to congress.

DRAPER CONCEDES DEFEAT

Congressman Foss Elected Governor of Massachusetts by 32,987 Plurality.

Boston, Nov. 9.—Governor Draper, in conceding his defeat by Congressman Foss, said: "It looks as if they had made me the target. I trust that they have confined it to the head of the ticket."

Governor-elect Foss said: "From the latest reports thus far received I think my plurality will reach 32,987. I believe Cassidy (Dem.) has been elected lieutenant governor and that we have carried seven congress districts in the state."

Lease Elected In South Carolina.

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 9.—Slight interest was manifested in the election in the state of South Carolina, the vote from reports received being about as usual. South Carolina always polls a light vote in general elections, as all Democratic nominations in primaries are equivalent to election. The state ticket led by Colonel E. B. Lease was pratically unopposed. Socialists having put out a gubernatorial candidate who received a few scattering votes.

Both Claim Victory In Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb. Nov. 9.—Fine weather and a heavy vote. The liquor issue as represented by the county option fight caused thousands to scratch the ballot. A heavy vote in the Western half of the state makes it look good for Aldrich (Rep.) for governor. Republicans claim his election by a large majority.

The Democrats are equally sanguine as to Dahlman. The indications are that Burkhett (Rep.) has been beaten by Hitchcock (Dem.) for the United States senate.

South Carolina Solidly Democratic.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 9.—South Carolina as usual went solidly Democratic, electing the full Democratic congressional ticket and the entire Democratic state ticket. Both tickets were named in the primary of two months ago.

Colonel L. B. Lease of Newberry is elected governor. The only opposition was that of a Socialist candidate who received merely a nominal vote.

Garry Herrmann Loses His District.

Cincinnatt, Nov. 9.—Judson Harmon Democratic candidate for governor, carried precinct A of the Tenth ward by 24. This is the home of Garry Herrmann, Boss Cox's most noted lieutenant.

Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 9.—Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi elected Democratic tickets by usual majorities. Louisiana and Mississippi elected congressmen and minor state officials. Texas named entire state ticket with bigger Democratic majorities than Campbell got two years ago. Louisiana ratified ten million bond issue part payment world's Panama exposition.

Republicans Gain In Michigan.

Detroit, Nov. 9.—The state ticket shows a Republican gain. Charles E. S. Osborn is elected governor by 60,000 nearly 50,000 more than Warner had had two years ago. All Republican candidates for congress are elected, with the possible exception of Dieckema in the Fifth and Denby in the First.

Georgia Returns 11 Democrats.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 9.—Early returns indicate that Georgia returned 11 Democrats to congress yesterday. In eight districts the Democratic candidates were unopposed.

Only congressmen were elected yesterday, Governor, statehouse officers and legislature having been chosen in October.

Republicans Sweep Rhode Island.

Providence, Nov. 9.—The re-election of Republican congressmen, Republican governor and state ticket and Republican mayor of Providence is indicated by returns from 355 districts. These districts comprise the small country towns which are always strongly Republican.

Stimson Congratulates Dix.

New York, Nov. 9.—Henry L. Stimson has sent the following telegram to John A. Dix: "The present returns indicate your election. I congratulate you and send you my good wishes for the success of your administration."

Democrats Carry Asbury Park.

New York, Nov. 9.—For the first time in history the Democrats have carried Asbury Park, the great Methodist resort on the New Jersey coast.

TENER ELECTED BY 20,000 PLURALITY

Representative Dalzell's Return to Congress Assured.

Pittsburg, Nov. 9. — Pennsylvania, the bulwark for years of Republicanism, held her own and elected a Republican governor, returned a legislature overwhelmingly Republican and will also send to congress a great majority of Republicans.

GOVERNOR-ELECT TENER.

It is estimated that the plurality of John E. Tener, Republican candidate for governor, will reach 20,000, a substantial one over Berry (Keystone); an increase over the majority of Governor Stuart, the present incumbent. Grim, the Democratic candidate, is hopelessly lost.

The re-election of Hon. John Dalzell (Rep.) to congress from the 30th district is assured. This was one of the most important fights in the state next to that of governor. Even Vice President Sherman of the United States came into the Pittsburg district to speak for Dalzell.

Anti-Prohibitionists Win In Florida.

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 9.—Interest in the election in Florida centered on the statewide prohibition contest. A constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of all liquors in the state was voted upon. Both sides claim victory and as many precincts are miles from telegraph or telephone, the result will not be definitely known for two days at least and even then the official canvass will be required to settle it. The indications are that the anti-Prohibitionists have carried the election by about 2,000 majority but this is by no means certain.

The Republicans had no ticket in the field for congress or for state offices.

Republicans Sweep Wisconsin.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 9.—At Republican state headquarters a sweeping Republican victory is claimed. P. E. McGovern, Republican candidate for governor, has an estimated plurality of 50,000 and LaFollette an even greater plurality for United States senator.
